

For those reasons the company is currently investing a considerable effort and amount of money in various products

"What we want to do, what everyone wants to do is to come up with snack foods that you enjoy eating and let me better for you," says Raymond Culp, the managing director and the owner of Lingo Foods.

The company is already developing new items and related items and creating product. It set up a dedicated research and development unit headed by its director. According to the management of the firm, the only